

Mary Barkuloo

Advertiser & Appeal; Vol. 2, No. 30; Wednesday 17 January 1877; pg. 5, col. 2

Death of Mrs. M.M. Barkuloo

It becomes our sad and painful duty to chronicle the death of Mrs. Barkuloo, of this city. For two weeks past she had been suffering from a severe attack of typhoid pneumonia, and on yesterday, she gently closed her eyes in quiet sleep--that sleep from which she will awake on the resurrection morn.

Of her ability as a teacher; her devotion to her children, and her quiet Christian spirit, no word from us is necessary--all who knew her can testify to these. Left a widow in '73 by the death of Col. Barkuloo, and although of very retiring disposition, she with true womanly courage braved the cares of life and maintained her family, rather than lean upon others. Of her it can well be said, "Truly she hath done what she could." Having a large family connection this sad news carries mourning to many a household. She leaves a family of four orphan children to mourn her irreparable loss.

Published: 1/17/1877