FORMER LOCAL RESIDENT DIES IN CALIFORNIA

News was received here today of the death of William J. Dangaix, who half century ago was one of Brunswick's leading business men, who succeeded here as a young man and then was so successful in later years that he became wealthy and a number of years ago retired and made his home in Los Angeles, where he died Monday. He will be buried here.

Mr. Dangaix came to Brunswick when a young man, and will be well remembered by many older residents. For years he was engaged in the insurance business under the firm name of O'Connor & Dangaix, the senior member of the firm being the late Thomas O'Connor. Offices were in the rear of a building on the site now occupied by Rish's Pharmacy.

Mr. Dangaix resided here for many years, and later went to Birmingham, Ala., where he was unusually successful in business.

During the last world war he was sent to Paris by President Woodrow Wilson on a special mission.

Up to some 15 or 20 years ago, Mr. Dangaix frequently visited Brunswick, always calling this city his home, and evidently he requested that he be buried here, as Mortician Edo Miller was notified today that the body had been forwarded to Brunswick.

Mrs. Isabel Allen, a sister, who also resided here for many years, will come here to attend the funeral, arrangements for which have not been completed, as the time of the arrival of the body is not known.
