

John Marlin

Advertiser & Appeal; Saturday 2 September 1882; pg. 6 col. 4

DEATH OF MR. J.S. MARLIN

Died, on the night of the 25th ult., Mr. J.S. Marlin, of this city. The deceased might well be remembered among the old citizens of Brunswick, having been a resident here for very many years. Being a man of strong constitution naturally, and leading an active life, he reached a ripe old age (seventy-four years), and at last passed away quietly, not by the violent hand of disease, but simply from a wearing out of the machinery of life. He leaves behind him a pure, Christian life -a rich legacy to his children. To that fond and loving wife who survives him, that dutiful son on whom he has leaned for support in declining years, and those affectionate daughters, we extend the sympathy of a heart that feels for them in their affliction, for in the death of Mr. Marlin the writer has lost a warm friends [sic]. Peace to his ashes.