

Peter Nelson

The Enquirer-Sun (Columbus, GA); Thursday 23 June 1892; pg. 2 col. 3

Capt. Peter Nelson, a prominent citizen of Brunswick, was run over about 8 o'clock Monday night, by an East Tennessee switch engine and killed. The body was horribly mangled. The deceased has lived in Brunswick for a number of years, and had been master of several steamers.

The Weekly Constitution (Atlanta, GA); Tuesday 28 June 1892

Brunswick, GA., June 20.-- Captain Peter Nelson, of the steamer Angie Nellie, was run over by a switch engine on the East Tennessee road tonight and instantly killed. Captain Nelson was headed for the steamer, and it is presumed he stumbled on the track. No one on the train knew of the accident and it left the city for the new docks. Later a negro found the body. The head, shoulders and breast were cut completely from the lower limbs. Nelson was formerly captain of the St. Simon's steamer, and was known to every summer visitor to the island.

Transcribed by Linda Blum-Barton for the USGenWeb Glynn County Archives